Dear Friends:

How often do we hear others, or catch ourselves, saying that someone else should do something about a problem? Several years ago, noted speaker and author John Izzo published his book Stepping Up: How Taking Responsibility Changes Everything in which he shared inspiration and practical advice on how ordinary people can step up and make a difference in work, family, community, and the world. As Izzo describes it, stepping up is when you see a need and decide you can, should, and will do something about it.

At VOC, stepping up has always been part of our nature. We witness it again this season as thousands of volunteers committed their weekends and evenings to give back to our great outdoors, stretching and stressing their muscles in new ways on our tallest peaks, remote wilderness trails, and urban parks and gardens. When these individual actions are aggregated, it’s remarkable to see what a difference our VOC volunteers make (who also have guessed that the many shovels of organic material removed from a trail, the hundreds of willows replanted by a river bank, and pounds of garden vegetables harvested by VOC volunteers would become miles of trail restored, critical watersheds protected, and fresh food for hundreds of our city’s homeless? Indeed, together we can accomplish amazing things. VOC’s launch of our Stepping Up Stewardship Toolkit this summer showcases another way in which we hope to create a ripple that grows across the state. By providing the resources to support organizations in their community-based volunteer and stewardship efforts, we will realize even greater capacity for more organizations to be able to engage volunteers in effectively caring for Colorado.

We are pleased to share in this report a few stories of ordinary people who, through VOC, made an extraordinary difference in 2018. As you read, we think you will agree that there is something contagious about VOC’s work: it offers opportunities for local businesses, schools, faith communities—indeed, all of us—to step up, give back, and care for the wondrous outdoor places that naturally unite us as Coloradans.

As 2018 comes to an end and we reflect on what’s ahead, we thank you for your tremendous support and hope you take your next step with VOC— as a volunteer and as a donor. We ask that you consider a generous gift this year, as we continue to step up to meet our state’s greatest stewardship challenges. Your support provides important opportunities and critical financial resources to ensure that all of us can come together to responsibly care for Colorado’s outdoors today and in the future.

Gratefully,

Amy Baker Easley
Executive Director

Jeff Trujillo
2018 Chair of the Board of Directors

When you explore Colorado, you get starring views, educational opportunities, and absolutely scenic vistas. Explore Colorado’s Great Outdoors December 4 by scheduling your contribution to VOC.

VOC’s Outdoor Stewardship Institute

When you explore Colorado, you get starring views, educational opportunities, and absolutely scenic vistas. Explore Colorado’s Great Outdoors December 4 by scheduling your contribution to VOC.

VOC’s Outdoor Stewardship Institute

When you explore Colorado, you get starring views, educational opportunities, and absolutely scenic vistas. Explore Colorado’s Great Outdoors December 4 by scheduling your contribution to VOC.

VOC’s Outdoor Stewardship Institute

When you explore Colorado, you get starring views, educational opportunities, and absolutely scenic vistas. Explore Colorado’s Great Outdoors December 4 by scheduling your contribution to VOC.

VOC’s Outdoor Stewardship Institute

When you explore Colorado, you get starring views, educational opportunities, and absolutely scenic vistas. Explore Colorado’s Great Outdoors December 4 by scheduling your contribution to VOC.

VOC’s Outdoor Stewardship Institute

When you explore Colorado, you get starring views, educational opportunities, and absolutely scenic vistas. Explore Colorado’s Great Outdoors December 4 by scheduling your contribution to VOC.

VOC’s Outdoor Stewardship Institute

When you explore Colorado, you get starring views, educational opportunities, and absolutely scenic vistas. Explore Colorado’s Great Outdoors December 4 by scheduling your contribution to VOC.

VOC’s Outdoor Stewardship Institute

When you explore Colorado, you get starring views, educational opportunities, and absolutely scenic vistas. Explore Colorado’s Great Outdoors December 4 by scheduling your contribution to VOC.

VOC’s Outdoor Stewardship Institute

When you explore Colorado, you get starring views, educational opportunities, and absolutely scenic vistas. Explore Colorado’s Great Outdoors December 4 by scheduling your contribution to VOC.

VOC’s Outdoor Stewardship Institute

When you explore Colorado, you get starring views, educational opportunities, and absolutely scenic vistas. Explore Colorado’s Great Outdoors December 4 by scheduling your contribution to VOC.
Dear Friends:

How often do we hear others, or catch ourselves, saying that someone else should do something about a problem? Several years ago, noted speaker and author John Izzo published his book Stepping Up: How Greatly Responsible Leaders Change Everything. Everything in the book shared inspiration and practical advice on how ordinary people can step up and make a difference in work, family, community, and the world. As Izzo describes it, stepping up is when you see a need and decide you can, should, and will do something about it.

At VOC, stepping up has always been part of our nature. We witnessed it again this season as hundreds of volunteers committed their weekends and evenings to give back to our great outdoors, stretching and stressing their muscles in new ways on our tallest peaks, remote wilderness trails, and urban parks and gardens. When these individual actions are aggregated, it’s remarkable to see what a difference VOC volunteers make. Who would have guessed that the many shovels of organic material removed from a trail, the hundreds of willows replanted by a river bank, and pounds of garden vegetables harvested by VOC volunteers would become miles of trail restored, critical watersheds protected, and fresh food for hundreds of our cities’ homeless? Indeed, together we can accomplish amazing things.

VOC’s launch of our Stepping Up Stewardship Toolkit this summer showcases another way in which we hope to create a ripple that grows across the state. By providing the tools and resources to strengthen and support organizations in their community-based volunteer and stewardship efforts, we will realize even greater capacity through organizations to be able to engage volunteers in effectively caring for Colorado.

We are pleased to share in this report a few stories of ordinary people who, through VOC, made an extraordinary difference in 2018. As you read, we think you will agree that there is something contagious about VOC’s work. It offers opportunities for local businesses, schools, faith communities—indeed, all of us—to step up, give back, and care for the wondrous outdoor places that naturally unite us as Coloradans.

As 2018 comes to an end and we reflect on what’s ahead, we thank you for your tremendous support and hope you take your next step with VOC—as a volunteer and as a donor. We ask that you consider a generous gift this year, or the world. As Izzo describes it, stepping up is when you see a need and decide you can, should, and will do something about it.

At VOC, stepping up has always been part of our nature. We witnessed it again this season as hundreds of volunteers committed their weekends and evenings to give back to our great outdoors, stretching and stressing their muscles in new ways on our tallest peaks, remote wilderness trails, and urban parks and gardens. When these individual actions are aggregated, it’s remarkable to see what a difference VOC volunteers make. Who would have guessed that the many shovels of organic material removed from a trail, the hundreds of willows replanted by a river bank, and pounds of garden vegetables harvested by VOC volunteers would become miles of trail restored, critical watersheds protected, and fresh food for hundreds of our cities’ homeless? Indeed, together we can accomplish amazing things.

VOC’s launch of our Stepping Up Stewardship Toolkit this summer showcases another way in which we hope to create a ripple that grows across the state. By providing the tools and resources to strengthen and support organizations in their community-based volunteer and stewardship efforts, we will realize even greater capacity through organizations to be able to engage volunteers in effectively caring for Colorado.

We are pleased to share in this report a few stories of ordinary people who, through VOC, made an extraordinary difference in 2018. As you read, we think you will agree that there is something contagious about VOC’s work. It offers opportunities for local businesses, schools, faith communities—indeed, all of us—to step up, give back, and care for the wondrous outdoor places that naturally unite us as Coloradans.

As 2018 comes to an end and we reflect on what’s ahead, we thank you for your tremendous support and hope you take your next step with VOC—as a volunteer and as a donor. We ask that you consider a generous gift this year, or the world. As Izzo describes it, stepping up is when you see a need and decide you can, should, and will do something about it.
Sharing Knowledge, Expanding Stewardship in the San Luis Valley

The San Luis Valley is home to some small towns and larger-than-life landscapes.

To better meet the area’s stewardship needs, VOC partnered with the Bureau of Land Management and the U.S. Forest Service to establish a field office in 2009, with an employee to live in, work with, and the local community. Now, through workshops funded by the San Luis Valley Conservation Collaborative, VOC staff is working directly with local groups to provide tools that strengthen organizational capacities to secure funding and sustain programs that will keep outdoor recreation and preserve the area’s watershed and agricultural heritage.

“VOC is proud of our ongoing involvement with the San Luis Valley Conservation Collaborative, which provides a forum for community members to learn from their neighbors about how to manage their natural resources and protect the environmental assets in their communities.”

But with more than 36,000 miles of trails in the state and an ever-growing demand for recreation, VOC can’t take care of Colorado alone. To solve the long-term challenges facing our resources, we’re looking beyond our own volunteer projects for ways in which we can elevate the efficacy of volunteers across the state. We are collaborating with nonprofits, community organizations, and land management agencies to raise awareness of individual responsibility and we’re developing tools to help expand local groups’ capacity to tackle community and regional needs.

This year, we shared decades of knowledge through workshops, events, and the launch of VOC’s online Stepping Up Stewardship Toolkit. In partnership with the Colorado Outdoor Stewardship Best Practices Guide, and we’ve expanded hands-on satellite office in the San Luis Valley, which helps fund the SUO. We’re also discovering new ways to work together to elevate stewardship capacity in the San Luis Valley and across Colorado and the U.S.

Our new Stepping Up Stewardship Toolkit complements our efforts to expand stewardship capacity and knowledge across the state and beyond Colorado and the U.S. Check it out at SteppingUpStewardship.org.

Grossman Scholarship Creates Lasting Legacy for Future Generations

When you donate to VOC, you do more than increase stewardship needs. Rick and Sue Grossman took their support further, creating a scholarship for outdoor stewards.

The Grossman Scholarship receives support from VOC, a local long- time supporter, who is funded on our Board of Directors from 2006 – 2008, and has continued since that time. Now, thanks to their generosity this year, VOC can reward those who care for the outdoors with two annual $5,000 scholarships: one for a non- traditional student and one for a traditional student.

All scholarship recipients are pursuing a career related to natural resources, from our 2018 Cari recipient, Ella Douglas, who started studying Environmental Sciences at the University of Colorado at Colorado State University, who decided to stay in Colorado to pursue a career related to natural resources, from our 2018 Cari recipient, Ella Douglas, who started studying Environmental Sciences at the University of Colorado at Colorado State University, who decided to stay in Colorado to pursue a career related to natural resources.

When you donate to VOC, you do more than increase stewardship needs. Rick and Sue Grossman took their support further, creating a scholarship for outdoor stewards.

The Grossman Scholarship receives support from VOC, a local long- time supporter, who is funded on our Board of Directors from 2006 – 2008, and has continued since that time. Now, thanks to their generosity this year, VOC can reward those who care for the outdoors with two annual $5,000 scholarships: one for a non- traditional student and one for a traditional student.

All scholarship recipients are pursuing a career related to natural resources, from our 2018 Cari recipient, Ella Douglas, who started studying Environmental Sciences at the University of Colorado at Colorado State University, who decided to stay in Colorado to pursue a career related to natural resources.

When you donate to VOC, you do more than increase stewardship needs. Rick and Sue Grossman took their support further, creating a scholarship for outdoor stewards.

The Grossman Scholarship receives support from VOC, a local long- time supporter, who is funded on our Board of Directors from 2006 – 2008, and has continued since that time. Now, thanks to their generosity this year, VOC can reward those who care for the outdoors with two annual $5,000 scholarships: one for a non- traditional student and one for a traditional student.

All scholarship recipients are pursuing a career related to natural resources, from our 2018 Cari recipient, Ella Douglas, who started studying Environmental Sciences at the University of Colorado at Colorado State University, who decided to stay in Colorado to pursue a career related to natural resources.

When you donate to VOC, you do more than increase stewardship needs. Rick and Sue Grossman took their support further, creating a scholarship for outdoor stewards.

The Grossman Scholarship receives support from VOC, a local long- time supporter, who is funded on our Board of Directors from 2006 – 2008, and has continued since that time. Now, thanks to their generosity this year, VOC can reward those who care for the outdoors with two annual $5,000 scholarships: one for a non- traditional student and one for a traditional student.

All scholarship recipients are pursuing a career related to natural resources, from our 2018 Cari recipient, Ella Douglas, who started studying Environmental Sciences at the University of Colorado at Colorado State University, who decided to stay in Colorado to pursue a career related to natural resources.

When you donate to VOC, you do more than increase stewardship needs. Rick and Sue Grossman took their support further, creating a scholarship for outdoor stewards.

The Grossman Scholarship receives support from VOC, a local long- time supporter, who is funded on our Board of Directors from 2006 – 2008, and has continued since that time. Now, thanks to their generosity this year, VOC can reward those who care for the outdoors with two annual $5,000 scholarships: one for a non- traditional student and one for a traditional student.

All scholarship recipients are pursuing a career related to natural resources, from our 2018 Cari recipient, Ella Douglas, who started studying Environmental Sciences at the University of Colorado at Colorado State University, who decided to stay in Colorado to pursue a career related to natural resources.

When you donate to VOC, you do more than increase stewardship needs. Rick and Sue Grossman took their support further, creating a scholarship for outdoor stewards.

The Grossman Scholarship receives support from VOC, a local long- time supporter, who is funded on our Board of Directors from 2006 – 2008, and has continued since that time. Now, thanks to their generosity this year, VOC can reward those who care for the outdoors with two annual $5,000 scholarships: one for a non- traditional student and one for a traditional student.

All scholarship recipients are pursuing a career related to natural resources, from our 2018 Cari recipient, Ella Douglas, who started studying Environmental Sciences at the University of Colorado at Colorado State University, who decided to stay in Colorado to pursue a career related to natural resources.
Sharing Knowledge, Expanding Stewardship in the San Luis Valley

It takes many different organizations, agencies, and groups to care for Colorado's diverse landscapes. VOC is working with communities and partners in the San Luis Valley to expand local access to, and stewardship of, public lands.

In the San Luis Valley, we have a network of more than 36,000 miles of trails and a growing demand for recreation. VOC can’t take care of Colorado alone. To solve the long-term challenges facing our nation, we’re looking beyond our own volunteer programs in ways that we can enhance the capacity of volunteers across the state.

Our efforts are paying off. This year, we worked with 36 land management agencies to engage 476 people in 52 projects across 65 unique locations, from the top of Mount Elbert and the Sangre de Cristo Mountains to the Rio Grande Wetland Area and the glows of the Sangre de Cristo Mountains, spending 57 nights sleeping under the stars and making connections.

To better meet the area’s stewardship needs, VOC partnered with the Bureau of Land Management and the U.S. Forest Service to establish a field office in 2019, with an employee to live in, work with, and the local community. Now, through workshops funded by the San Luis Valley Conservation and Community Stewardship Collaborative (SLV C2C), we are working directly with local groups to provide tools that strengthen organizational capacities to secure funding and sustain programs that will protect our outdoor recreation and preserve the area’s water, soil, and agricultural heritage.

“With new partners offering our own volunteer approaches through these workshops,” explained Judy Lopez, Conservation Project Manager for Colorado Open Lands’ satellite office in the San Luis Valley, which helps fund the SLV C2C, “we’re also discovering new ways to work together and a commitment toward common goals.”

Our new Stepping Up Stewardship Toolkit complements our efforts to expand the San Luis Valley’s capacity to care for the outdoors and across Colorado and the U.S.

#FindYourPlace with VOC!

When VOC formed in 1984, it involved 200 volunteers on three projects. And as Colorado has grown, so have we– we've grown, too. We've been consistently fine-tuning our volunteer, youth, and training programs to make outdoor volunteerism more efficient, cost-effective, and an easy option for public land agencies.

Our efforts are paying off. This year, we worked with 36 land management agencies to engage 476 people in 52 projects across 65 unique locations, from the top of Mount Elbert and the Sangre de Cristo Mountains to the Rio Grande Wetland Area and the glows of the Sangre de Cristo Mountains, spending 57 nights sleeping under the stars and making connections.

To better meet the area’s stewardship needs, VOC partnered with the Bureau of Land Management and the U.S. Forest Service to establish a field office in 2019, with an employee to live in, work with, and the local community. Now, through workshops funded by the San Luis Valley Conservation and Community Stewardship Collaborative (SLV C2C), we are working directly with local groups to provide tools that strengthen organizational capacities to secure funding and sustain programs that will protect our outdoor recreation and preserve the area’s water, soil, and agricultural heritage.

“With new partners offering our own volunteer approaches through these workshops,” explained Judy Lopez, Conservation Project Manager for Colorado Open Lands’ satellite office in the San Luis Valley, which helps fund the SLV C2C, “we’re also discovering new ways to work together and a commitment toward common goals.”

Our new Stepping Up Stewardship Toolkit complements our efforts to expand the San Luis Valley’s capacity to care for the outdoors and across Colorado and the U.S.

Check it out at SteppingUpStewardship.org.

##Grossman Scholarship Creates Lasting Legacy for Future Generations##

When you donate to VOC, you do more than meet immediate stewardship needs. Rick and Susie Grossman took their support further, creating a scholarship for outdoor stewards.

The Grossman Scholarship is supported by VOC, and tithe books served on our Board of Directors from 2006 – 2008, and has continued over the past decade.

Now, thanks to their generosity this year, VOC can reward those who care for the outdoors with two annual $5,000 scholarships: one for a non-traditional student and one for a graduate or our Cams Youth Program. VOC says it will continue to expand the scholarship to meet a greater need.

“Thanks to their generosity this year, VOC can reward those who care for the outdoors with two annual $5,000 scholarships: one for a non-traditional student and one for a graduate or our Cams Youth Program. VOC says it will continue to expand the scholarship to meet a greater need.”

#FindYourPlace with VOC!

Follow us on social media @voc_colorado and sign up for our newsletter to stay up-to-date with all things stewardship.

##Blazing Trails for Women, By Women##

When you donate to VOC, you do more than meet immediate stewardship needs. Rick and Susie Grossman took their support further, creating a scholarship for outdoor stewards.

The Grossman Scholarship is supported by VOC, and tithe books served on our Board of Directors from 2006 – 2008, and has continued over the past decade.

Now, thanks to their generosity this year, VOC can reward those who care for the outdoors with two annual $5,000 scholarships: one for a non-traditional student and one for a graduate or our Cams Youth Program. VOC says it will continue to expand the scholarship to meet a greater need.

“Thanks to their generosity this year, VOC can reward those who care for the outdoors with two annual $5,000 scholarships: one for a non-traditional student and one for a graduate or our Cams Youth Program. VOC says it will continue to expand the scholarship to meet a greater need.”

#FindYourPlace with VOC!

Follow us on social media @voc_colorado and sign up for our newsletter to stay up-to-date with all things stewardship.

Thank you to the following companies for supporting VOC through a Corporate Stewardship with a Team (SWAT) volunteer project: Alpine Bank Ankenyo Creek, Colorado Bureau of Land Management Brewers Association Colorado State Bank and Trust Eating Recovery Center EKS&H, now part of Plante Moran Great-West Financial Health Trust Landmark Trust Lockenhead Martin Monarch Investment Group Newmont Mining Noble Energy Otten Johnson Prologis Schneider Electric U.S. Forest Service Xcel Energy

Businesses Step Up for Stewardship

Bake Cohler first volunteered with VOC in 1998. The experience stayed with him for years, and he later became President and CEO of CORE Consultants, its company is dedicated to supporting stewardship.
Sharing Knowledge, Expanding Stewardship in the San Luis Valley

It takes many different organizations, agencies, and groups to care for Colorado’s diverse landscapes. VOC is working with communities and partners in the San Luis Valley to expand local access to, and stewardship of, public lands. We’ve worked to bridge the gap between the San Juan and Sangre de Cristo mountains, “SLV” to home its small towns and larger-than-life landscapes.

To better meet the area’s stewardship needs, VOC partnered with the Bureau of Land Management and the U.S. Forest Service to establish a field office in 2009, with an emphasis on active volunteerism, both locally and across the community.

Our efforts are paying off. This year, we worked with 36 landowners to engage 1,768 people in 50 projects across 65 various locations, from the top of Mount Elbert and Quandary Peak to the edge of the Great Sand Dunes, the valley floor and the Sangre de Cristo Mountains, spending 575,552 volunteer hours to help secure the landscape.

We’re not just boasting our own achievements through these workshops,” explained Judy Lopez, Conservation Project Manager for Colorado Open Lands’ satellite office in the San Luis Valley, which helps fund the SLV Eco Center. “We’re also discovering new ways to work together and fostering boundary-spanning collaborations.

Our new Stepping Up Stewardship Toolkit complements our efforts to expand stewardship training through our Outdoor Stewardship Institute (OSI).

Just this year, we shared decades of knowledge through events, workshops, and the Colorado Outdoor Stewardship Best Practices Guide, and we’ve expanded hands-on training through our Outdoor Stewardship Institute (OSI).

“SLV” is home to small towns and larger-than-life landscapes. It takes many different organizations, agencies, and land management agencies to raise awareness around the campfire.

Keep reading to learn more about the ways we’re working to introduce more people to outdoors.

Grossman Scholarship Creates Lasting Legacy for Future Generations

When you donate to VOC, you do more than invest in stewardship needs. Rick and Susie Grossman took their support further, creating a scholarship for outdoor stewards.

Our Grossman Scholarship (GSO) was awarded long before Rick served on our Board of Directors from 2006 – 2008 and has continued on over the past decade.

Now, thanks to their generosity this year, VOC can reward those who care for the outdoors with two annual $5,000 scholarships; one for a non-traditional student and one for a graduate of our Camp Trout Program.

Keep reading to learn more about the ways we’re working to introduce more people to the joys of volunteering and, in the great outdoors. As we move into 2019 and the years ahead, we hope you join us in making caring for the outdoors part of our common culture; by working together, we can create a unified force capable of tackling Colorado’s environmental challenges.

In 2019, we shared decades of knowledge through events, workshops, and the Colorado Outdoor Stewardship Best Practices Guide, and we’ve expanded hands-on training through our Outdoor Stewardship Institute (OSI).

We’re not just boasting our own achievements through these workshops,” explained Judy Lopez, Conservation Project Manager for Colorado Open Lands’ satellite office in the San Luis Valley, which helps fund the SLV Eco Center. “We’re also discovering new ways to work together and fostering boundary-spanning collaborations.

Our new Stepping Up Stewardship Toolkit complements our efforts to expand stewardship training through our Outdoor Stewardship Institute (OSI).

Just this year, we shared decades of knowledge through events, workshops, and the Colorado Outdoor Stewardship Best Practices Guide, and we’ve expanded hands-on training through our Outdoor Stewardship Institute (OSI).

When you donate to VOC, you do more than invest in stewardship needs. Rick and Susie Grossman took their support further, creating a scholarship for outdoor stewards.

Our Grossman Scholarship (GSO) was awarded long before Rick served on our Board of Directors from 2006 – 2008 and has continued on over the past decade.

Now, thanks to their generosity this year, VOC can reward those who care for the outdoors with two annual $5,000 scholarships; one for a non-traditional student and one for a graduate of our Camp Trout Program.

Keep reading to learn more about the ways we’re working to introduce more people to the joys of volunteering and, in the great outdoors. As we move into 2019 and the years ahead, we hope you join us in making caring for the outdoors part of our common culture; by working together, we can create a unified force capable of tackling Colorado’s environmental challenges.
When VOC formed in 1984, we involved 200 volunteers. By 2019, we had more than 36,000 volunteers. This past summer, we engaged 47,000 people in 56 projects across 65 stunning locations, from the top of Mount Elbert and the glow of the Sangre de Cristo Mountains, spending 57 nights sleeping under the stars and making connections. We are collaborating with nonprofits, community organizations, and land management agencies to raise awareness around the campfire.

Sharing Knowledge, Expanding Stewardship in the San Luis Valley

It takes many different organizations, agencies, and groups to care for Colorado's diverse landscapes. VOC is working with communities and partners in the San Luis Valley to expand local access to, and stewardship of, public lands.

To better meet the area's stewardship needs, VOC partnered with the Bureau of Land Management and the U.S. Forest Service to establish a field office in 2009, with an employee to live in, work with, and the local community.

Now, through workshops funded by the San Luis Valley Conservation and Community Trust, VOC is now working directly with local groups to provide tools that strengthen organizational capacities to secure funding and sustain programs that will go on to expand outdoor recreation and preserve and enhance watershed and agricultural heritage.

“We’re not boasting our own organizations through these workshops,” explained Judy Copic, Outdoors Manager for San Luis Valley satellite office in the San Luis Valley, which helps fund the BLM/CU. “We’re also discovering new ways to work together, which is critical to common goals.”

Our new Stepping Up Stewardship Toolkit complements our efforts to expand stewardship capacity in the San Luis Valley and across Colorado. Let’s Check it out at SteppingUpStewardship.org.

Brazing Trails for Women, By Women

Do you need help with your next project? 100 women gathered at Floyd Hill Open Space to build a trail. By the end of the day, nearly 500 VOC volunteers had worked together to create a trail connected to a popular trailhead near Guanella Pass to provide easy access to the San Luis Valley.

“With VOC, we see CORE employees the most engaged volunteers, always making a meaningful difference,” Blake said. “And it’s great to see our employees working together and problem solving in a new environment. Our team comes back with a better understanding of the respect for each other.”

Colorado’s outdoors are huge, Blake added, and VOC works with both employees and partners to help more people get outside. By doing so, they’re better able to work together for the businesses and people themselves.

Grossman Scholarship Creates Lasting Legacy for Future Generations

When you donate to VOC, you do more than invest in our future stewardship. Rick and Suze Grossman took their support further, creating a scholarship for outdoor stewardship.

The Grossmans say their support of VOC, a trail long before Rick served on our Board of Directors from 2006 – 2008, has continued over the past decade. Now, thanks to their generosity this year, VOC can reward those who care for the outdoors with two annual $5,000 scholarships: one for a non-traditional student and one for a graduate of our Cairn Youth Program.

All scholarships are awarded to a person related to natural resources, from our 2018 Cairn recipient, Ella Douglas, who started studying Environmental Sciences at the University of Colorado Boulder for the love of the outdoors, to bats, and work tích on a passion for nature into a career and is pursuing a Masters of Natural Resources Stewardship at Colorado State University.

Thank you to the following companies for supporting VOC through a Corporate Stewardship with a Team (SMT) volunteer project: Alpine Bank
Anadarko
Bureau of Land Management
Brewers Association
Colorado State Bank and Trust
Eating Recovery Center
FSAAR, now part of Prairie Mountain
Great-West Financial
Lockheed Martin
Monarch Investment Group
Newmont Mining
Noble Energy
Otten Johnson Prologis
PPL EnergyPlus
Schneider Electric
U.S. Forest Service
Xcel Energy

Thank you to the following companies for supporting VOC through a Corporate Stewardship with a Team (SMT) volunteer project: Alpine Bank
Anadarko
Bureau of Land Management
Brewers Association
Colorado State Bank and Trust
Eating Recovery Center
FSAAR, now part of Prairie Mountain
Great-West Financial
Lockheed Martin
Monarch Investment Group
Newmont Mining
Noble Energy
Otten Johnson Prologis
PPL EnergyPlus
Schneider Electric
U.S. Forest Service
Xcel Energy

The men-only project was so successful that we’re already planning for a similar one in 2019. Stay tuned to voc.org for details.

The next round of applications will open in early 2019 at voc.org/scholarship.

Businesses Step Up for Stewardship

Blake Colbert first volunteered with VOC in 1998. The experience stayed with him for years. And last year, as President and CEO of CORE Consultants, his company is dedicated to supporting stewardship.

With more than 20 miles of trails and an ever-growing demand for recreation, VOC can’t take care of Colorado alone. To solve the long-term challenges facing our outdoors, we’re looking beyond our volunteer projects for ways in which we can alleviate the efficacy of volunteers across the state. We are collaborating with nonprofits, community organizations, and land management agencies to raise awareness of individual responsibility and we’re developing tools to help expand local groups’ capacity to tackle community and regional needs.

But with more than 36,000 miles of trails in the state and an ever-growing demand for recreation, VOC can’t take care of Colorado alone. To solve the long-term challenges facing our outdoors, we’re looking beyond our volunteer projects for ways in which we can alleviate the efficacy of volunteers across the state. We are collaborating with nonprofits, community organizations, and land management agencies to raise awareness of individual responsibility and we’re developing tools to help expand local groups’ capacity to tackle community and regional needs.

But with more than 36,000 miles of trails in the state and an ever-growing demand for recreation, VOC can’t take care of Colorado alone. To solve the long-term challenges facing our outdoors, we’re looking beyond our volunteer projects for ways in which we can alleviate the efficacy of volunteers across the state. We are collaborating with nonprofits, community organizations, and land management agencies to raise awareness of individual responsibility and we’re developing tools to help expand local groups’ capacity to tackle community and regional needs.

But with more than 36,000 miles of trails in the state and an ever-growing demand for recreation, VOC can’t take care of Colorado alone. To solve the long-term challenges facing our outdoors, we’re looking beyond our volunteer projects for ways in which we can alleviate the efficacy of volunteers across the state. We are collaborating with nonprofits, community organizations, and land management agencies to raise awareness of individual responsibility and we’re developing tools to help expand local groups’ capacity to tackle community and regional needs.

But with more than 36,000 miles of trails in the state and an ever-growing demand for recreation, VOC can’t take care of Colorado alone. To solve the long-term challenges facing our outdoors, we’re looking beyond our volunteer projects for ways in which we can alleviate the efficacy of volunteers across the state. We are collaborating with nonprofits, community organizations, and land management agencies to raise awareness of individual responsibility and we’re developing tools to help expand local groups’ capacity to tackle community and regional needs.
Dear Friends:

How often do we have others, or catch ourselves, saying that someone else should do something about a problem? Several years ago, noted speaker and author John Izzo published his book Stepping Up: How (Self-) Responsibility Changes Everything in which he shared inspiration and practical advice on how ordinary people can step up and make a difference in work, family, community, or the world. As Izzo describes it, stepping up is when you see a need and decide you can, should, and will do something about it.

At VOC, stepping up has always been part of our nature! We witnessed it again this season as thousands of volunteers committed their weekends and evenings to give back to our great outdoors, stretching and stressng their muscles in new ways on our tallest peaks, remote wilderness trails, and urban parks and gardens. When these individual actions are aggregated, it’s remarkable to see what a difference VOC volunteers make (who would have guessed that the many shovels of organic material removed from a trail, the hundreds of willows replanted by a river bank, and pounds of garden vegetables harvested by VOC volunteers would become miles of trail restored, critical watersheds protected, and fresh food for hundreds of our cities’ homeless? Indeed, together we can accomplish amazing things.

VOC’s launch of our Stepping Up Stewardship Toolkit this summer showcases another way in which we hope to create a ripple that grows across the state. By providing the resources to strengthen and support organizations in their community-based volunteer and stewardship efforts, we will realize even greater capacity for more organizations to be able to engage volunteers in effective caring for Colorado.

We are pleased to share in this report a few stories of ordinary people who, through VOC, made an extraordinary difference in 2018. As Izzo would say, we thank you will agree that there is something contagious about VOC’s work. It offers opportunities for local businesses, schools, faith communities—indeed, all of us—to step up, give back, and care for the wondrous outdoor places that naturally unite us as Coloradans.

As 2018 comes to an end and we reflect on what’s ahead, we thank you for your tremendous support and hope you take your next step with VOC—as a volunteer and as a donor. We ask that you consider a generous gift this year as we continue to step up to meet our state’s greatest stewardship challenges.

Your support provides important opportunities and critical financial resources to ensure that all of us can come together to responsibly care for Colorado’s outdoors today and in the future.

Gratefully,

Andy Baker Eddy
Executive Director

Jeff Trujillo 2018 Chair of the Board of Directors

2018 Financial Overview

- Earned Revenues
  - Individuals 27%
  - Partner Organizations 19%
  - Corporations 13%
  - Government Agencies 12%
  - Foundations 10%
- Volunteers 22%
- Program Costs 31%
- Administrative 28%
- Fundraising 7%
- Other revenue 6%

2018 YEAR-END REPORT

www.voc.org

Learn about the power of everyday people in caring for Colorado’s outdoors through contributions of time, talent, resources, and passion.
Together, we made a big impact on Colorado.

Dear Friends:

How often do we hear others, or catch ourselves, saying that someone else should do something about a problem? Several years ago, noted speaker and author John Izzo published his book Stepping Up: How Giving Responsibility Changes Everything in which he shared inspiration and practical advice on how ordinary people can step up and make a difference in work, family, community, or the world. As Izzo describes it, stepping up is when you see a need and decide you can, should, and will do something about it.

At VOC, stepping up has always been part of our nature. We witnessed it again this year as hundreds of volunteers committed their weekends and evenings to give back to our great outdoors, stretching and stress- ing their muscles in new ways on our tallest peaks, remote wilderness trails, and urban parks and gardens. When these individual actions are aggregated, it's remarkable to see what a difference our VOC volunteers make (who also have guessed that the many shovels of organic material removed from a trail, the hundreds of willows replanted by a river bank, and pounds of garden vegetables harvested by VOC volunteers) would become miles of trail restored, critical watershed protected, and fresh food for hundreds of our cities' homeless! Indeed, together we can accomplish amazing things.

VOC's launch of our Stepping Up Stewardship Toolkit this summer showcases another way in which we hope to create a ripple that grows across the state. By providing the tools and resources to strengthen and support organizations in their community-based volunteer and stewardship efforts, we will realize even greater capacity for more organizations to be able to engage volunteers in their community-based volunteer and stewardship efforts, we will realize even greater capacity for more organizations to be able to engage volunteers in effectively caring for Colorado.

We are pleased to share in this report a few stories of ordinary people who, through VOC, made an extraordinary difference in 2018. As you read, we think you will agree that there is something contagious about VOC's work. It offers opportunities for local businesses, schools, faith communities—and, indeed, all of us—to step up, give back, and care for the wondrous outdoor places that naturally smile us as Coloradans.

As 2018 comes to an end and we reflect on what's ahead, we thank you for your tremendous support and help you take your next step with VOC—as a volunteer and as a donor. We ask that you consider a generous gift this year, as we continue to step up to meet our state's greatest stewardship challenges.

Your support provides important opportunities and critical financial resources to ensure that all of us can come together to responsibly care for Colorado's outdoors today and in the future.

Gratefully,

Jeff Trujillo
Executive Director

Jeff Trujillo 2018 Chair of the Board of Directors

When you explore Colorado, you are also looking for opportunities to give back to our great outdoors.ボルダーキャントンのボランティア・オーガニゼーションや303-715-1010のボランティア・イベントを知り、あなたの貢献をして、ボルダーキャントンの資源を保護し、発展を加速しましょう。
Thank you to our friends, partners, and supporters for a successful season of stewardship! Your support makes our work possible.

VOC 2018 Board of Directors

Allison Altaras
Sean Bahoshy
Jim Bedwell
Ginny Brannon
Ryan Chase
Jeff Cornelius
Paige de Kock
Gerald Free
Matt Greenberg
Laura Harmon
Jack Ihle
Dara MacDonald
Matt Teeters
Jeff Trujillo
Tarn Udall
THANK YOU TO OUR SUPPORTERS
(from October 17, 2017 to October 16, 2018)

VISIONARIES ($50,000+)
Bureau of Land Management - Colorado State Office
Great Outdoors Colorado (GOCO)
Karsh Hagan
Mike O’Brien Living Trust
National Forest Foundation
U.S. Forest Service

STEWARDSHIP SOCIETY ($25,000 - $49,999)
City and County of Denver Parks & Recreation
Colorado Parks & Wildlife
El Pomar Foundation
Gates Family Foundation
Noble Energy, Inc.
San Luis Valley Conservation and Connection Initiative
Sandy Elliott
Xcel Energy Foundation

TRUSTEES’ CIRCLE ($10,000 - $24,999)
Anadarko Petroleum Corporation
Anonymous
Bank of America Charitable Foundation
Clear Creek County Open Space Commission
Continental Divide Trail Coalition
CORE Consultants
Firmen Fund
Fred & Jean Allegretti Foundation
Freeport-McMoRan Foundation
IMI-Norgren
Jay Kenney & Emily Sinclair
Johnson Foundation of the Rockies
National Wilderness Stewardship Alliance
REI (Recreational Equipment, Inc.)
Rick & Susie Grossman
Roundup Riders of the Rockies Heritage & Trails Foundation
The Summit Foundation
Town of Breckenridge

LEADERSHIP CIRCLE ($5,000 - $9,999)
Alpine Bank
andeavor
Anschutz Family Foundation
City of Boulder
Colorado Lottery
Colorado Native
EKSI&H, now part of Plante Moran
Harlan & Lois Anderson Family Foundation
Lockheed Martin
Newmont Mining Corporation
Otten Johnson Robinson Neff + Ragonetti PC
Suncor
The Denver Foundation
Town of Crestone
Wayne & Cathy Zahm
Whole Foods Market - Denver

CONSERVATORS ($1,000 - $4,999)
Andrew Eiseman & Brian Braa
Anthony York
Apple Inc.
Apto
Aveda via the Global Greengrants Fund
Bob & Linda Zaparanick
Bob Van Wetter & Betsy Brew
Brad & Melissa McQueen
Brewers Association
Brownstein Hyatt Farber Schreck, LLP
Burrell Family Foundation
CenturyLink
City of Aurora
City of Colorado Springs
Clif Bar & Company
CoBank
Community Shares of Colorado
David & Nancy Marlow
Eating Recovery Center
Enterprise Holdings Foundation and Commercial Truck Rental
Eric Meer
George C. Schamel II
Great-West Life & Annuity Insurance Company
Greg & Rebecca Watson
Herrington Family Charitable Foundation, a Donor Advised Fund of The U.S. Charitable Gift Trust
Hines
IQ Wired, Inc.
Jake Isaacson
Jeff & Mia Trujillo
KEEN Footwear
Ken Gart
Kori McClurg
LaRimer County Natural Resources
Laura M. Harmon
Lazy Dog Restaurants
Mahoney Family Foundation
Mary Agster
Monarch Investment and Management Group
Montgomery Cieworth
New Belgium Brewing Company
NewGen Strategies & Solutions
Patagonia - Denver
PB and K Family Foundation
Prologis
RevGen Partners
Rocky Mountain Elk Foundation
Rose Beyer
Salesforce
Sam Packer & Sue Collins
Scheels
Sean & Melissa Bahoshy
Sharon L. Menard
Steve & Carol Jennison
Steve West & Ronda Rolain
Stuart Miner & Mary Hashem
The Schoelzel Family
Todd & Priscilla Clayton
UMB Bank
Wege Foundation
GUARDIANS ($500-$999)
Alan Davison
Anonymous
Ashton J. Villars, Jr.
Brownell Bailey
CenturyLink Clarke M. Williams Foundation
Charlotte & Reed Pritchard
Clint & Megan Emmerich
Community First Foundation
Dan & Jennifer Grooters
Dara MacDonald
Darcie White
Dave Newkirk & Susan Lazo
Debbie Buchele
Gary Nelson
Ginny Brannon
Google
Graham & Cathy Hollis
Jack Ihle
Jane Wingle
Jeff Cornelius
Jennifer & Michael Freeman
Jesse Crock Art
Jim & Jana Kay Martin
Jim & Kathy Emme
Jim Bedwell
Joe Chastain & Nancy Clark
Joel & Jean McCormack
John & Carolyn Saeman
John & Mary Bayard
Laura Hanssen
Linda Jean Strand
Martha Records & Richard Rainaldi
Martin Herz
Matt & Allison Altaras
Matt Teeters
Medtronic Foundation
Mr. & Mrs. Wallach
Pat McClearn
Peter L. MacDonald
Roy Knappe, Jr. & Karen L. Knappe
Rust-Oleum Cares
Scott VanEyk
Stephen Marsters
Stu Roberts & Lulu Gould
Sue Anschutz-Rodgers
The Challenge School
The Chappell Family
The Humphreys Foundation
Tim & Sue Damour
Wade Rosen
William Gorham & Joanne McGee
Berry Creek Metropolitan District
Brad Wright
Carol & Adam Wagner
Christine & Todd Strickland
Dana Coelho
Dave Riter
David Bell & Family
David Osborn
Dean & Sheila Winstanley
DeDe Williams
Donald Heppermann & Nancy Felker
Doris Burd
Dorothy & Brian Kern
Dr. Jennifer Tarin
Ed & Sharon Benson, Jr.
Ellen Chiilikas
Ellen Urell
Erie Scott & Dave Emick
Frank & Monty Kugeler
Garden Club of Denver
George & Cornelia Gibson
George Lyndon Berry & Jeanne Younghaus
Gertrude Grant
Gina Guy
Greg & Mary Helen Stults
Grover Cleveland
Halvorson-Freese 21st Century Fund
Heidi & McGregor Whitney
Helen & Jim Northup
Henry & Nancy Trujillo
Jan Schmidt
James & Mary Burger
Jim Jacobson & Karen Schulz
Kim Allegretti
Lisa M. Lewis
Lisa Miller
Lynn Formanek
Lynn Solis
Mary Munger
Matthew Greenberg & Amanda Smith Greenberg
Matthew, Jennifer, Boden & Beck Hamilton
Maureen & Michael Allen
Melanie Morgan
NVIDIA
Patricia Elias
PricewaterhouseCoopers LLP
Progressive Insurance Foundation
Roger & Anita Williams
Roger, Nancy & Elise Mutz
Rose Community Foundation
Ross McClure
Rotberg Comens Booth Foundation
Ryan & Jessie Chase
Singletree Property Owners Association
Spencer Denison & Kara Horner
Stephen Ruyle
The Sidney B. & Caleb F. Gates Fund
Thomas Gougeon & Donna Middlebrooks
Tim & Carolyn Bishop
Todd Landrum
Vermilion Construction
Wendy Hodges
Wesley Go & Sook Hee Lee
Your Mountain Connection

TRAILBLAZERS ($249 & under):
683 individuals gave a Trailblazers level gift in 2018. Please accept our sincerest gratitude for your support of outdoor stewardship!

GIFTS IN MEMORY OF:
Charmain Choate
Chuck Caldwell
Dos Chappell
Gina Guy
H. Peter Wingle
Larry Freshour
Matthew Kern
Mike Polosky
Patrick Crowley
Reginald Davenport
Roni Sherb
William P. Agster

HONOR GIFTS:
We are grateful for the many donations given in honor of VOC leadership, volunteers, and supporters.

CORPORATE MATCHING GIFTS
Apple Inc.
Boettcher Foundation
CenturyLink Clarke M. Williams Foundation
Charles Schwab Foundation
EnCana Cares Foundation
Google
Kaiser Permanente
Medtronic Foundation
NVIDIA
PricewaterhouseCoopers LLP
Progressive Insurance Foundation
Rose Community Foundation
Rust-Oleum Cares
Salesforce
Schneider Electric
The Boeing Company
UnitedHealth Group
Western Union Foundation
Xcel Energy Foundation

We strive for excellence to accurately and properly recognize all of our individual, corporate, foundation, government, agency and other supporters. We apologize in advance for any discrepancies or errors. Please notify us of any changes.
IN-KIND SUPPORTERS
($100+ Value)
Alpacka Raft
AmeriCorps NCCC
Aspen Skiing Company
Avery Brewing Company
Bear Creek Distillery
Big Agnes
Black Arts Cellars
Campus Cycles
Catherine Hansen-Stamp
Clif Bar & Company
Colorado Cider Company
Colorado Lottery
Colorado Native
Colorado NativeWear
Colorado Parks & Wildlife
Conundrum Outfitters
CorePower Yoga
Corvus Coffee
Crestone Brewing Co.
Einstein Bros Bagels
El Pomar Foundation
Hogan Lovells US LLP
John Fielder
Kristi Mountain Sports, LLC
Lagunitas Brewing Co.
Lisa & Steve Thilker
MAD Greens
Martin Herz
Melanzana Mountain Gear
Mick Daniel
National Forest Foundation
Nest Fresh Eggs
New Belgium Brewing Company
Noble Energy, Inc.
Outland Living
Patagonia - Denver
Raquelitas Tortillas
Red Bird Farms
REI (Recreational Equipment, Inc.)
Royal Crest Dairy Inc.
Sierra Nevada Brewing Co.
SmartWool Advocacy General Fund
Snarf's Sandwiches
Starbucks
Steve Austin
Tagawa Gardens
Teatulia
The Magnolia Hotel
TIMBR Basecamps
Wolf Creek Ski Area

PARTNER ORGANIZATIONS
AloTerra Restoration Services, LLC
Alpine Achievers Initiative
Aurora Open Space and Natural Resources Division
Baca National Wildlife Refuge
Boys & Girls Club of Metro Denver
Bureau of Land Management
- Gunnison Resource Area
- San Luis Valley Office
- Uncompahgre Field Office
City of Boulder Open Space & Mountain Parks
City and County of Denver Parks & Recreation
City of Brighton
City of Colorado Springs
City of Lakewood
cityWILD
Clear Creek County Open Space Commission
Colorado Fourteeners Initiative
Colorado Mountain Club
Colorado Mountain College
Colorado Parks & Wildlife
- Arkansas Headwaters Recreation Area
- Castlegood Canyon State Park
- Chatfield State Park
- Cherry Creek State Park
- Golden Gate Canyon State Park
- Jackson Lake State Park
- Lory State Park
- Pearl Lake State Park
- Roxborough State Park
- St. Vrain State Park
- State Forest State Park
- Urad State Wildlife Area
Colorado State Land Board
Continental Divide Trail Coalition
Eastern San Luis Valley Trails Coalition
Friends of the Dillon Ranger District
Great Sand Dunes National Park & Preserve
Grow Local Colorado
Headwaters Alliance
Headwaters Trail Alliance
High Plains Environmental Center
Keystone Science School
La Veta Trails
Lake International School
Mile High Youth Corps
Mountain Park Environmental Center
Mt. Evans Outdoor Lab School
Rocky Mountain Conservancy
San Luis Valley Great Outdoors (SLV GO)
Stanley British Primary School
The Nature Connection
The Urban Farm
Town of Breckenridge
Trips for Kids Denver/Boulder
U.S. Forest Service
- Boulder Ranger District
- Clear Creek Ranger District
- Comanche National Grassland
- Conejos Peak Ranger District
- Dillon Ranger District
- Eagle-Holy Cross Ranger District
- Hahns Peak-Bears Ears Ranger District
- Leadville Ranger District
- Pikes Peak Ranger District
- Saguache Ranger District
- Salida Ranger District
- South Platte Ranger District
- Sulphur Ranger District
Vail Valley Mountain Bike Association
Western Mountain Youth Services
Willow Creek Reclamation Committee
Town of Windsor
Yampatika

2018 NEW VOLUNTEER LEADERS

Alex Alma, Crew Leader
Jason Friedman, Crew Leader
Mark Hendrickson, Crew Leader
Mark Hinchman, Crew Leader
Steve Hulsberg, Crew Leader
Eric Lucas, Crew Leader
Desirae McCutchen, Crew Leader
Danielle Piscatelli, Crew Leader
Mike Scott, Crew Leader
Paul Schreck, Crew Leader
Luke Whitaker, Crew Leader
Katie Goodleaf, Crew Chef
Whitney Goodleaf, Crew Chef
Sean Mallory, Tool Manager
Michael McMahon, Tool Manager
Renee Steele, Tool Manager
Robin Donner, OSI Instructor
Ryan Durham, OSI Instructor
Danielle Piscatelli, OSI Instructor
Ellen Urell, OSI Instructor

2018 VOLUNTEER PHOTOGRAPHERS
Cindy Bond
Lori Burke
Liz Brown
Christine Carlson
Jason J. Hatfield
Ciarra Hill
Jessica Hughes
David J. Kennedy (cover image)
Julie Majors
Sharon Menard
Kim Mock
Nicolas Sablan
Jenny Zichterman

Congratulations to our new volunteer leaders! Learn more about volunteer leadership at voc.org/volunteers.